The Intelligence School provides three of the major segments of the OTR Career Training Program:

1. Introduction to Intelligence -- a two-week, full-time course designed to give Career Trainees a thorough understanding of the nature of intelligence and of the Agency's role in the national security structure.

2. Intelligence Techniques - a three-week, full-time course designed to give all Career Trainees a general understanding of the techniques and methodologies employed in the production of finished intelligence.

3. Intelligence Production - a nine-week, full-time course designed for those Career Trainees whose initial work assignment will be in the intelligence production areas of the Agency -- the DDI and the DDS&T. This course is an exploration in depth of the problems of producing finished intelligence. The course is primarily a combination of live problem solving and at-the-desk observation of, and discussion with, the working analysts in the various producing components.
